IN CAPITAL CORRIDORSPresident May Tap
Gen. Taylor for CIA

Speculation on President Johnson's appointments has proven risky, but the report from informed circles is that he intends to appoint Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor as director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Taylor

There reportedly has been some dissatisfaction with the operations of the present director, Adm. William Raborn.

President Kennedy wanted Taylor to take over the CIA after the Bay of Pigs in 1961, but the general became his military adviser instead.

Johnson apparently feels he needs a prestige name in the CIA job now, and Taylor fits the bill.
